

Utah Speakers - A History Lesson

Fender used Utah speakers occasionally in the 50's and these were apparently pretty good speakers as far as quality and tone are concerned. Fender continued to sparsely use Utah's during the 60's. (Most likely when they couldn't get enough Jensen's, CTS's, or Oxfords to do the job). But these speakers didn't hold up well or sound as good as the 50's versions.

During the 70's, fender used Utah's quite alot. But by this time, the quality of the speakers had drastically dropped from the one's that are found in either the 60's or the 50's amps.

Utah went on to become "Pyle" speakers made by Radio Shack for car audio use in the 80's.
